Ex-UN chief says crisis
may breed more graft

GENEVA, SWITZERLAND—JERRE'S YET another danger from the global economic crisis. It could breed more corruption, as recession-stricken officials increasingly demand bribes and hungry companies compete for shrinking resources.

Yet few words were dedicated to fighting graft at the World Economic Forum of business and political decision-makers.

Show 3 cops alive, military tells NPA

Rebels say gov't won't negotiate

By Jocelyn R. Uy

THE MILITARY YESTERDAY demanded that guerrillas of the communist New People's Army show proof that the three police officers held captive in Rizal since last month are alive.

A photograph in a phone call to prove that Insp. Ben Compa and PGT Alberto Urrutia and PGT Maria Aguirre are out of harm's way would do, Philippine Army spokesperson Lt. Col. Ramon Banaag Jr. said in a phone interview with the Inquirer.

"But the NPA has not shown any proof since the three were held captive," Banaag said.

Communist rebels yesterday said the government had rejected offers to negotiate for the release of the three police officers captured early last month after a gun battle in Rodriguez town in which one officer was killed and two others injured.

Banaag stressed that the military was standing pat on its resolve not to negotiate with criminals and communist rebels. "Negotiations are an undertaking of the government, not of the military," he said.

In a statement, Armed Forces of the Philippines said:

Save capitalism, social democrats urged

By Amanda Dorville

AUSTRALIAN PRIME MINISTER SIVIN fielded on Saturday called on social democratic governments all over the world to use state power to "save capitalism from itself."

ANALYSIS

Raild heard the call to arms at the World Economic Forum in Davos, Switzerland, attacked the collapse of more than 30 years of the dominance of global capitalism by Wall Street bankers in the wake of the most catastrophic financial crisis in 80 years.

In a major ideological essay on the shift of economic power to the international state, examples of which were published by Australia and international media, Raild said only social democrats, such as his Australian Labor Party, could harness state power after the "catastrophic financial crisis in 80 years."

GMA prods Obama to act on recession

By Christine V. Esguerra

PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-ARROYO has urged US President Barack Obama to "do something" to address the worsening global economic crisis that started with the subprime mortgage crisis in the United States.

"What we want is for America to do something because the last thing we want is for America to do nothing. You may be vague on what should be done, but the worst thing is for it not to do anything," Macapagal said at the World Economic Forum in Davos, Switzerland, last Sunday night.

Obama is pushing for an $825-billion stimulus package on top of the $700 billion for the Troubled Asset Relief Program initiated by the Bush administration late last year to bail out banks and other financial institu-

Davos meet sees rise of big gov't

GENEVA, SWITZERLAND—THE WORLD is entering an era of big governments with only state muscle powerful enough to fight the economic crisis, top leaders signaled at the Davos summit.

Stems of mass job losses and fears of social unrest and protectionism reverberated around the gloomy halls of the World Economic Forum.

But the absence of any serious member of President Barack Obama's US administration in the Swiss resort and national meetings in Washington left doubts about how closely the major powers will take up the battle together.

By Fernando del Mundo

ANTONIO CALIGRO GO IS BACK WITH A vengeance.

A sample critique is published on this page under his byline. Last year, the self-styled "book doctor" crusader had thrown in the towel.

A cabal of commentators had gone after him hammer and tongs after his media campaign against error-filled textbooks used in private elementary schools had finally resulted in the Department of Education (DepEd) banning this material this school year.

The torrent of invectives in op-ed pages in newspapers—one to the billions—came in the midst of the bullying by a publisher of alleged revision charges that a court had earlier dismissed.

Go, 57, academic supervisor of Manila-based of Quinson City, has denied the charges. He had faced similar accusations, along with libel, through the courts or as years of his literary adversary from authors and publishers he had stepped on.

But the ton of bricks hit at a particularly bad time. Go, who has been taking care of an ailing mother, had fallen ill. He told the Inquirer that he could not deal with the accusations, his heart ailments and his own health problems all at the same time. On top of this, he noted that the campaign had elicited little public support.

"The decision to 'come back' was a

Lakas narrows 2010 presidential candidate choices to 4

By Christine O. Asensio

LAKAS OFFICIALS HAVE NARROWED TO FOUR their choices for the party's standard-bearer in next year's presidential elections.

The list are all provided to be suitable presidential candidates and "include a lady" according to Senate Majority Leader Juan Miguel Zubelli, who is also Lakas secretary-general.

Zubelli declined to identify the list, however. "We don't want to expose our hand... it's too early," he told the Inquirer in a phone interview yesterday.

In addition to one of the last living senators, he said another was a "house games player" and "maybe a dark horse."

Zubelli said the four were also not from a docket of 15 possible candidates by Lakas officials led by chair emerita, former President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo, during an extensive consultation meeting at McKinley Bay Resort in Clark Field, Pampanga, last week.

President Arroyo's forces won't start the morning but did not say how long enough to produce to the discussion as possible candidates, Zubelli said.

President Arroyo, he said,

"may take a break until the choice of the presidential candidate or the vice-presidential choice on her job, especially after the country's voting."

"Over Lakas and Arroyo go to go, we can make our own decision... and eventually we will present to the President the possible candidates," Zubelli said.

His Arroyo is Lakas national chair and Kampo's founder.

Lakas members had been meeting to possible presidential candidate Sen. Antonio "Sonny" Guezo, Quezon City Mayor Pido Dela Rosa, Metrobank Chairman Development Authority Chair Reynold Brando, and Richard Gordon and Vice President Noli de Guzman.

Also possible, Sen. Francis Burdette indicated he would announce his plans for 2010.

by whom he came 63 in Quezon City as income was published on Saturday. Gordon said he did not announce his bid for in Quezon City that he was meeting for possible next year.

"I am not yet qualified. This is my commitment to my constituents, members of the senate as anybody I meet, who ask me if I am running for the presidency in 2010," he said.

Fight over who's on top hinders merger

WHO WILL BE THE DOMINANT force in the merger of Lakas, CMO and Kampo? It is the main building block to the union of two of the country's dominant political parties.

Lakas, the bigger and older of the two parties, is looking on cautiously and will not be in a hurry to merge. It is reportedly demanding an issue that is 50-50 between the two parties.

In issue is who will be the official candidate of the merged coalition in the localities.

"Who will be the one to lead Lakas, it should be obvious who should be the winning party in the merger. We will not settle for anything less than control," said Lakas Vice President George de la Cruz in a phone interview.

Guezo said Kampo should not accept that it would be the minor party in the alliance in order to join the merger. He also said that the merger should be a 50-50 split between the two parties.

"Who the dominant party will be is not actually being," he said. "We're just following the order of the President to merge with Kampo. But if it fails, we will still be the dominant party."

He said Lakas was willing to work on the alliance for a "minimum of three months," as he said the party would want to see with Lakas Kampo.

Guezo said there would be a "transition period" for the merger.

Despite the negotiating efforts, Guezo and Zubelli said the merger talks should not allow them to change the Lakas group in 2010. Zubelli said the merger would be a 50-50 split between the two parties.

More powers sought for BSP vs bad banks

By Doreen C. Dumlao and Parnell Dominguez

THE LOCAL financial community has been a reluctant witness as Congress gives the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) greater powers, including immunity from suit, to act swiftly against bad banks, according to a recent release of 11 bad banks, given more powers to the Capital Market Development Council (CMDC), an empowered "graveyard" over the industry of the BSP to handle judicial obstacles and act swiftly against the banks that had shown signs of trouble, and financial problems were shown years ago.

Preempt action: "Faster and stronger legislative action is called for to remove public confidence."

"While our economy may have been spared the direct hit of global financial institutions failure in the US, we need to lower ourselves for the full impact of the global economic and financial crisis," they said. "It is to be expected that our domestic financial market is kept stable," they added. The CMDC is a private government advisory group created by the Financial Sector Area Institute of the Philippines (FSAI) and coordinated by the Department of Finance and Economic and Exchange Commission.

Membership: Its members include the Philippine Stock Exchange, Philippine Insurance, Securities Association of the Philippines, Investment House Association of the Philippines, Philippine Labor Union Association, Philippine Federation of Professional Regulators, Philippine Insurance and Retirement Association, and Philippine Association of Securities Brokers and Dealers.

"We wish to express our grave concern over the circumstances surrounding the recent failure of a significant group of real banks that engaged in predatory financial activities," they said.

Alarming: "It is extremely alarming that the regulatory actions of the BSP are being hindered by court action of a long-term economic order," they added.

The associations were asking the Legislature to grant them 13 out of 21 real banks that are currently listed but have failed.

The banks called after engaging in double your money deposit schemes. The BSP has expressed that it had assurances reports to the Legislature's unimpaired powers but could not act because the group obtained last year a TRO from the Manila Regional Trial Court, which was subsequently affirmed by the Court of Appeals.

The BSP finally closed the banks in November last year after the Supreme Court annulled the lower courts orders.

Drug tests reset to get more info out

By Philip C. Tulawa

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION (DepEd) has reset the start of random drug testing in public schools from today to Wednesday to give education officials more time to gather official information about it, education secretary DepEd Armin Luistro said.

Luistro said the DepEd decided on the postponement after consultations with school principals in Metro Manila and the Department of Health.

"The drug testing is reset to Feb. 4 so we can have more time for the information campaign for students and parents," Luistro said.

About 6,000 schools will participate in the random drug tests, with 10 employees per school designated. DepEd will hold 20 seminars across the country to meet the target of 10,000 students tested for drug use by March.

Luistro said the DepEd had already chosen the first 25 schools in Metro Manila where the tests would be launched and the postponement to Wednesday would give school officials enough time to explain to parents and students the objectives of the tests.

"The Commission on Human Rights had warned that anything that such random testing could be interpreted to be a violation of a person's right to privacy," Luistro said.

"So it's important for DepEd to explain to students that substance use is a health issue and drug testing is necessary but that it must also aim to provide treatment and not punishment," Luistro said, quoting the Department of Health.

"All students and their parents will be notified in writing of the manner by which the random drug testing shall be conducted. Failure to obtain the acknowledgment receipt shall not be a bar to the random drug testing," Luistro said.

Luistro said the 10,000 randomly chosen students would have undergone "screening tests," the results of which would be ready two days or more. If a student tests positive, he or she would have a "counseling session."

A positive result in the screening test is not a ground for suspension or any disciplinary action against the student, Luistro stressed.

The DepEd would instead refer the student to a government-accredited laboratory to physically determine the student's "dependency level."

"Positive results on drug dependency shall be an easy cause for the suspension of the student and shall be used to inform any school district, city, district and legal action against the student," Luistro said.

President Arroyo's secretary ordered the random drug tests after a follow-up survey involving the prosecution of suspected wealthy illegal smokers in the drug testing program.

DepEd said the drug tests are the country, especially among the youth.

House bill would boost film industry

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES has approved a bill that would allow tax incentives to companies in the local film industry that has been plagued by high taxes for more than a decade.

The chamber approved, on third reading, House Bill 3524 lowering the assessment rate on movie theaters to 10 percent, from 14 to 10 percent by amending Section 140 of the Local Government Code, which imposed the high assessment tax.

Speaker Juan P. Arroyo said, one of the principal authors of the bill, now with major a tax break would give more money to the local film industry as that would give producers a better chance to recoup their investments in what has been a risky arena as the movie business is not immune to the economy.

"The movie industry is dying. More of the movie business in the Philippines have closed due to the high assessment of movie theaters and film taxes," said Arroyo, who is also the House Speaker.

He stressed the high assessment tax on the steep drop in local film production, from an average of 200 films made annually in the 1990s to only 30 films made this year. Aside from the assessment tax, local movie producers are slapped a 12-percent value-added tax on imported filmmaking raw materials and equipment, a 35-percent corporate income tax, and a 5-percent local withholding tax on a producer's film share.

AFF pension fund on way out—Teodoro

By Jocelyn B. Wy with the assistance of the editorial staff of the Philippine Daily Inquirer

THE DAILY GOSPEL

Monday, January 1, 2009
Presentation of the Lord, 4th Day of Commemorative Lent
Mt 11:1-6
Lk 4:14-21
14:23-35

When the day came for the presentation of the infant Jesus, the evangelist Luke tells us that the child was named Jesus. This was the first time the name Jesus was used in the Bible. The name Jesus is the Greek form of the Hebrew name Joshua, which means "God saves." The name Jesus is also the name of the Son of God, who came to save the world. The name Jesus is a reminder that God is with us and that he will save us from all our sins.

Alternative
The alternative right now is for the government to continue paying for the retirement benefits through private insurance companies. The government should not be responsible for the retirement benefits of its employees. The government should be responsible for the education and health care of its citizens. The government should be responsible for the welfare of its citizens. The government should be responsible for the future of the Philippines.

Hunt on in another country for Marcos loot

By Philip C. Tobias

WITH NO MORE Marcos, a long search for the whereabouts of the Marcos family's ill-gotten wealth continues in another country where it is believed to be hidden. In a move reminiscent of the late President's search for his family's ill-gotten wealth, the Philippine Commission on Good Government (CIGG) is now hunting for the whereabouts of the Marcos family's ill-gotten wealth in another country where it is believed to be hidden. The victory came after the Swiss Federal Criminal Court in December declined the appeal of GGG lawyer, Rodolfo C. Macabalan, who had won the case in the Swiss court. THE CHINESE FIRM that built the Manila Metro Rail Transit System (MRTS) has asked the Supreme Court to junk a petition filed by a group of lawyers to annul the contract.

It is a petition for annulment of contract, the Chinese Ministry of Machinery and Equipment Group sought the dismissal of the suit filed by a group of lawyers.

It added the RTC had no jurisdiction over the company as an agent of China which is a sovereign state.

It added the RTC had no jurisdiction over the contract since it was the result of an executive agreement between two sovereign states.

Former ON-RENT has already commenced its design and construction work on the Northrail project, increased in previous times, 40%, and the Chinese firm paid in its position filed by lawyer Luis Rigan.

Hindrance
"All of these would be put to naught if the proceedings will continue before the public respondent (Mabini RTC) Judge Cesar Liman and without a doubt, the pending case before the trial court will serve as a great hindrance to the progress and development of the Northrail project," it said.

Public interest lawyers who include Harry Roque and Jose R. Reyes, sought the annulment of the Northrail contract between the Mabini RTC, claiming it was discriminatory in the procurement.

The petition noted the contract was awarded without a public bidding and that construction would result in the displacement of people.

COMSEC questioned the jurisdiction of the RTC because the Court of Appeals in Manila ruled, against the Mabini RTC's decision to continue hearing the case.

Owner, employees of posh Boracay resort face raps

By Hazel F. Burgos
Reporter-Magasin

CELEB CITY—CORRAL charged three men filed against the owner and employees of a posh resort in Boracay Island over a property dispute on the island resort.

In a complaint filed before the Manila Provincial Prosecutor's Office on Jan. 21, Probate Bureau accused three Boracay Island resort owners and 30 security guards and other alleged personnel of the resort of various offenses.

The complaint, filed by lawyers of One White Beach Resort, was prompted by an alleged confrontation between the security guards of the two neighboring resorts on Jan. 17. The guards of One White Beach allegedly destroyed the premises there, where the One White Beach Resort is being constructed, and attempted to force the entry to Boracay Island, said the northern end of the 1,000-hectare island.

A hot firefight ensued between the guards of the two properties. A worker of Probate Bureau identified as John T. Macao, was injured in the fight. Lawyer Thomas Tanco, one of the legal counsels of One White Beach, said in a recent telephone interview that one of his guards fired a warning shot after the security guards force was destroyed.

But the guards of Probate insights fired back towards the One White Beach guards.

The complaint was supported by an affidavit of John Magpang, Jr., chief of security of the One White Beach property.

Magpang said he is confident that he found in the security personnel of Probate Bureau in all instances and expected responses to incidents of the last year.

Tanco said Probate Bureau was claiming ownership of a 100-hectare area near that was part of the 1.3-hectare property of One White Beach.

The ground ownership of the days Probate failed to respond was a possible reason for the incidents and expected responses to incidents of the last year.

The 106th Anniversary of the Land Registration Authority

Growth, Maturity, and Advancement for the LRA

On the occasion of its 106th Anniversary, the Land Registration Authority (LRA) takes a great leap forward with a strong outlook for the future.

This year's anniversary revolves around the theme GMA for the LRA:

- Growth of a National Land Computer Network;
- Maturity of a New Bureaucracy; and
- Advancement of the Needs of the Public.

Indeed, the LRA remains involved in several projects of national importance. For instance, the LRA is the primary support agency in the implementation of the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP). As such, all Registries of Deeds throughout the country play a vital role in the registration of Emancipation Patents and Certificates of Land Ownership Award for free.

The LRA presently works through one hundred sixty-four (164) Registries of Deeds distributed throughout the country, all tasked to safeguard the integrity of untitled lands, chattel mortgages, and personal property. With the construction of additional registries coinciding with the refurbishment of existing facilities, it is the Agency's hope to deliver even better service to the transacting public.

Consistently ranked among the top revenue earners of the national government, the LRA marks yet another banner year in terms of revenue generation. As of the end of November 2008, the agency has earned over three billion pesos in registration fees, with the highest collections coming from Quezon City, Makati, and the province of Cavite. As such, the LRA retains its place as one of the top four government revenue earners.

Growth of a National Land Computer Network

In the coming years, the LRA hopes to improve its services further through the digitization of all records on file via the Land Tiling Computerization Project (LTCP). A modernization project created under the Build-Own-Operate (BOO) scheme of the Build-Operate-Transfer (BOT) Law, the LTCP is geared towards greatly augmenting the efficiency of the LRA, allowing it to provide data and better services to the public.

Given the need for improved public service by way of computer technology, 2008 saw the preliminary implementation of the LTCP via three pilot Registries of Deeds: Quezon City, Parañaque, and Cebu. For these three target areas, all land titles and relevant documents have been scanned and encoded into a database specifically created to secure land titles from fraud and/or theft by unscrupulous individuals and organizations.

As part of the first phase of implementation, new offices have been constructed for the Registries of Deeds in Cebu and Quezon City, while extensive renovation was recently completed for the Parañaque Registry. Fifteen (15) Registries are expected to be constructed during the second phase of implementation and renovation will be done on the other forty-nine (49) sites. At present, sixty-four (64) Registries of Deeds are being prepared for the implementation of Phase II.

As of 30 June 2008, over a million titles and supporting documents have been scanned. It is envisioned that the land records of the country will truly be secure and more easily accessed upon the full implementation of the Project.

Maturity of a New Bureaucracy

With the implementation of the LTCP, it is expected that the integrity of the LRA will increase significantly with a concurrent decrease in corruption and fraudulent practices within the agency.

This drive towards a more service-oriented culture within the LRA was bolstered further by Task Force: Tinubog Malinis. Known colloquially as the TFM, the activities of the task force were done in collaboration with the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) and the Office of the Solicitor General (OSG).

Based on its year-end report, the TFM resolved a total of one hundred and twelve (112) cases for appropriate action, thirty-five (35) of which were turned over to the NBI and five to the OSG for further investigation and action.

With the digitization of other registries in the offing, it is expected that the reduced human intervention will lead to more streamlined processes resulting in better service and reduced fraud.

Advancement of the Needs of the Public

In the years to come, the public can expect numerous improvements within the LRA, specifically:

- The implementation of a more secure Terrors Registration System;
- Cleaner, more orderly offices offering streamlined transactions;
- More personable public servants who will be able to meet the needs of the transacting public;
- Increased transactions and revenues that will significantly benefit the national economy; and
- Total satisfaction through effective and efficient public service.

With the advent of the LTCP and the implementation of other projects for the protection of land titles, it is expected that the LRA will better safeguard the public trust through the securing of all titles.

WESLEY SO: Four straight wins.

Wesley virtual champ in tough Corus tilt

Standing after 11 rounds in each side: Wesley So, 10-1; Viswanathan Anand, 10-1; Veselin Topalov, 10-1; Peter Leko, 10-1; Peter Svidler, 10-1; Magnus Carlsen, 10-1; Fabiano Caruana, 10-1; Anand, 10-1; Topalov, 10-1; Leko, 10-1; Svidler, 10-1; Carlsen, 10-1; Caruana, 10-1.

WESLEY SO, NETHERLANDS—Facing his second International Master Magnus Carlsen of The Netherlands in the 11th round, and before Grandmaster Tiger Hillary Ponsioen of Sweden in the 12th and penultimate round Sunday to virtually win the Group C title of the 7th Corus Chess Tournament. The main victors. An Israeli tonight once showing an eighth-round setback, he GM Viswanathan Anand—gave the 22-year-old Filipino sensation a one-point lead over Gibraltar's Anish Giri of Russia with only one round left in the six-day 11-tournament.

The experienced SO, currently the world's youngest GM, impressed his own top-notch and unblemished to display 11th and final round match against Anand and GM David Howell of England last Sunday and still stand up first.

Only Giri, who beat GMs Eduardo Iturrizaga of Venezuela and Shantlens Leon Hoyos of Mexico in succession for eight points, has a chance to catch up with So. That is, if he beats 1920th Chess Olympiad star of India and Sri Lanka in Round 12.

National Chess Federation of the Philippines (NCFP) president, Professor "Bobby" Pichay and secretary general, Supreme City Interior Assistant "Bobby" Talamantez headed SO's departure here, saying his success in the tournament is a source of joy for the country.

The other wing of SO, a high school junior in St. Francis of Assisi in Marikina, Carlin, said in the expression of GM Pichay that he is "very happy" to see his friend win. GM Hillary Ponsioen of Sweden in the 11th round, GM Marcel Grooten-Huis of Mexico in the 10th round, the 14th GM Shantlens Leon Hoyos of Mexico in the eighth round, GM David Howell of England in the 11th round, and Ponsioen in the 11th round, Ponsioen and Ponsioen.

Baguio traders out to retrain retrenched workers, miners

By Vicent Cabares
Inquirer Staff Writer, Baguio

BAGUIO CITY—THE CITY'S TOP businessmen are being lobbied by the Department of Labor and Employment to check their money-making schemes with retrenched workers of Texas Instruments Philippines Inc. (TIP) and local miners.

Instead of punishing Baguio's labor force for being approached by the department to help look down up with business leaders, like Cordillera mayor Benito Cayetano and McDonald's franchise owner Michael del Rosario, and lawyer Ana-Rose, DOLC Cordillera director.

Many displaced workers plan to invest in small businesses to help them through a global recession, and are seeking advice from businessmen "that work," he said.

Cayetano has created a brand name, "Bakara," to accompany her signature Baguio women, while del Rosario is long in an old Baguio business family that owns a five-level chain, a hotel and supermarket.

Oliver said she was surprised by the behavior being exhibited by the region's affluent labor force.

As of the end of 2008, 1,916 Cordillera workers had been classified by DOLC as affected by the global recession, unrecorded.

Displaced workers eager to learn new ways to earn a living

Oliver said that the workers were not displaced due to retrenchment or laid off from annual working hours and policies to ensure productivity and to keep their company afloat in times of crisis.

TIP was the first American-led firm to shut 411 employees in late December and early January.

DOLC has been observing 1,916 employees of the Japanese Consolidated Mining Corp. (JCMC) for signs of distress because the firm implemented a cost-cutting measure to cope with the low demand for metals.

Oliver said online surveys approached DOLC last week in work-alike about working-hour job options.

"They wanted to be trained in electronics, plumbing... should a retraining center in their service," she said.

At least 70 retrenched TIP workers have signed up for entrepreneurial retraining training, Oliver said.

"Many of the TIP employees got fully retrained and they may end up doing business in their communities," she said.

TIP spokesman has already announced, despite the change of other Texas Instruments facilities in the United States and other countries, Oliver said.

"To me, that, at least, is a good sign because they are still getting work," she said.

JCMC has also agreed its work hours because of recent improvement in metal markets, she said.

DOLC is organizing a speaker's bu-ness for "business sharing" sessions with the displaced workers.

Oliver said the relative calm exhibited by the displaced workers was an indication of their resilience.

"They have not been panicky," she said. "They are not scared by the crisis. They want work."

10 ways to earn extra income

TODAY'S ECONOMIC CRISIS has created challenging and wondrous times for many Filipino families. As people struggle to make ends meet in the face of the credit crunch and rising food, education and housing expenses, many are looking for ways to not only cut expenses, but also to make more money.

The thought of securing a second job is today's reality for many people. However, there are many accessible, viable opportunities available that will help provide the needed supplement to income.

Here are 10 suggestions:

1. Go into direct selling.—There are a number of direct selling companies that offer varied business opportunities. Avon, the foremost, provides the opportunity to run a business from the home. And with its Avon Philippines website, which features a virtual brochure, you don't need to travel to refer friends and friends of friends to check out Avon products online and just call you to place their order.
2. Earn money from your business.—Turn your garden into a produce shop, put your wood-chop skills to good use, or offer housekeeping services to friends and neighbors.
3. Put your musical talents to good use.—Can you play an instrument? Offer to play at social parties, or provide music lessons for a fee per hour.
4. Have a garage sale or put unwanted and unwanted items up for sale.
5. Put your writing skills to good use.—Are you a good writer? Take advantage of freelancing opportunities or place ads in your local paper to market your writing or editing abilities.
6. Become a tutor.—If you are more than one language, or a genius at math?
7. Put your writing skills to good use.—Are you a good writer? Take advantage of freelancing opportunities or place ads in your local paper to market your writing or editing abilities.

Asean holds symposium on traditional textiles

By Mary C. Santiago

FELICIA-SABIDO ENJOYED FROM a market vendor and a designer of the new design Agapardo's department store into an atmosphere of EN. Having, finally, visited the capital of the Philippines, Sabido and recently a publisher of the Philippine book "Garden of Heaven, Garden of Science".

A 50-year-old woman from Manila, Sabido is the only surviving woman who works in the average low-profit house (the last few months have been producing fabric).

From Feb. 1-3 at the National Museum, the 2nd Asian Traditional Textiles Symposium will discuss how indigenous materials and crafts skills can be preserved and be commercially viable. Delegates from 11 Asian nations will tackle issues on how their textile traditions can be made relevant to the 21st century.

"Textiles are one of our most ancient culture. Humanity is indebted to textiles—the weaving, loom, support to the environment and many traditions. Many social interactions have been made through textiles. Since textiles are the basis of our garments, they could be our identity," says Gopal Arora, president of the National Museum and as head of the symposium.

She adds that traditional textiles are difficult to preserve since new materials are getting to be more common and the demand for globalization. To keep the tradition of textile production going, demand has to be created through information, marketing and promotion.

Traditional function:

"People should be made aware of the traditional function of textiles," says Arora, citing textiles which served the nation.

For instance, the sarong is also considered as an important, not a metaphor for a person who is shy and doubtful. However, in Malaysia culture, the sarong represents an ancestral spirit. When worn close to the body, it is believed to provide protection to an ancestor.

The making was shorter months (month) of textile representation of respect for the natural world. Similarly, Malaysia built society was made under the influence of Islam, which leads it impossible to depict animals.

On the other hand, Indonesian batik, an adaptation of Hindu, Islam, Chinese and Western culture, is vibrant with geometric figures, nature and animal shapes. Arora says (Singapore) have more to offer if they understand the original meaning of the fabric. A common thread is the design of the Singaporean dress (the design of the Singaporean dress) into more decorative with tapestry or embroidery.

"If you study the textile, the range of human activity is infinite. The last way the people can make more about them is through this conference. Experts will make comparative studies where we can learn about our links with other cultures," says Arora.

Long Ishihara, president of Kikyo Textile Co. Ltd. (Japan), will discuss the production and sustainability of silk textile in Cambodia.

Arora will talk about introducing silk to provide livelihood to farmers, while the United Nations of Nations will discuss problems in sustaining traditional textiles on Pacific Island, Guam.

Arora says the Philippines face its own challenges in preserving tradition. In Indonesia, women have had in the flying loom, as the Muslim-Christian conflict in Sarawak production. Also, local women are using commercial dye instead of natural dye due to their scarcity.

Another reason traditional textiles are not considered mainstream is that Filipinos consider undergarments as women's apparel or domestic occasion, unlike in India and Indonesia where the sarong and batik, respectively, are mostly people from all walks of life as part of their daily attire.

Bazaar, fashion show

A bazaar and a fashion show aim to promote textile to modern and commercial circles. Organized by Gopal Arora, the bazaar offers a wide range of indigenous materials from the Philippines and Indonesia.

Arora says as "Ade Johnson of Indonesia will produce a special line just for the conference.

Mila Padilla, president of the Philippine Foundation of the Philippines and organizer of the bazaar show, has commissioned designers from Manila and Asean to make special textile such as sarong, barong, Philippine sarong, pinotex, silk dress and other items.

Designers Lito Ben-Gon, Ben-Gon Ben-Gon, Ben-Gon Ben-Gon and Ben-Gon Ben-Gon will design their bazaar contemporary fashion.

Michael Ongpin, entrepreneur, fashionista, says that the bazaar has attracted the public interest, which only the Philippine producers. However, despite such success, there is a lack of research on providing sources and suppliers to potential international buyers.

"The textile industry is the pillar of the economy," she says. "If we can give more opportunities to the rural economy people will have a higher standard of living. We are in the loop with our textiles. They are part of our identity and culture, and, hopefully also of our lives."

DRAWING IS considered the foundation of architecture. An artist who goes through to abstraction without first learning how to use a line is often considered as a loss of direction.

This is a common argument in the design, conceptualization, learning, the Art students of University of the Philippines and University of the Philippines. To use their own words, they prove, with academic—because, however, experts also believe designers to learn how to use a line.

Three years ago, a newly formed artists' group, the Philippine Drawing Society, launched the first national drawing competition "In a field as tough to enter the standards of drawing is a major concern." It involved both, competing and non-competing artists, students and teachers, to submit up to two pieces each, along with drawing materials.

That contest over 100 artists, many of them students, participated. Some relatively unknown artists, particularly in the field, had stepped up and in a few cases even experienced their careers.

Of the winning artists and teachers, most were concerned figures wearing their graphic design to fully formed paintings, a line of abstract forms, some playing with color, intensity and perspective, rendered in pen-and-ink or pencil then enhanced by or filled with watercolor, acrylic, oil.

The winning artist, "Mikaela" Sarmiento, a personal candidate for the National Artistic, said

What growing kids need in milk

RESEARCHERS should find and be more aware of which milk best suits their children's needs for their developing minds and bodies.

By Rowena Burgos

Milk has high nutrient value. It supplies body-building protein, bone-forming calcium and health-giving vitamins and essential energy-giving lactose and essential fatty acids.

Milk must contain nutrients that children need for body growth, strong body defense and brain development, according to nutritionist Neil Sans-Altagracia, MS PhD.

"Mothers should find and be more aware of which milk best suits their children's needs for their developing minds and bodies," she says.

Calcium and Protein

An excellent source of essential nutrients, milk contains highly absorbable calcium which helps build and maintain bones and teeth.

Calcium absorption is highest in milk, reaching up to 60 percent. This essential nutrient is considered the main building block of the structure of the bones because it makes the skeleton thick, strong and dense. Calcium leaves the risk of osteoporosis in old age, too.

"Kids who get enough calcium and physical activities have the highest chance of building strong bones," Sans-Altagracia says.

Calcium also controls various body processes such as muscle contractions and heart beat regulation.

Protein is also present in milk for normal body growth. According to Sans-Altagracia, milk protein contains all the essential amino acids required by the body for growth and building and repairing tissues.

Probiotics and Prebiotics

Research has shown that there are special ingredients that help build body defenses. Examples of these are probiotics and prebiotics.

Probiotics are good microorganisms that help maintain gastrointestinal health resulting in stronger body defense and protection against infections and diseases.

José Samadín, a well-known pediatrician, says that feeding kids good food is a step further than providing basic nutrients for growth and development. "The inclusion of probiotics (or food) addresses an important vitamin of nutrition: supporting and modulating children's immune system," Samadín says.

The Nestlé Research Center in Lausanne, France and collaborated with Imperial College London on a research that highlighted antibiotic resistance and probiotics help improve the health of the gut.

Probiotics help the digestive system repair itself after children have been treated with antibiotics. Probiotics restore the good bacteria that were depleted by antibiotics. They

Does Your Child's Milk Help Build Body Defenses?

Be sure to check for the following important nutrients:

Probiotics

Probiotics are good microorganisms that help maintain gastrointestinal health, resulting in stronger body defense and protection against infections and diseases.

NIDO 3+ has Lactobacillus PROTECTUS*, a live probiotic strain of Lactobacillus paracasei combined with the complementary benefits of Bifidobacterium longum that is proprietary to Nestlé. One gram of NIDO 3+ yields at least 10 million Lactobacillus paracasei and 3 million Bifidobacterium longum. This amount is important to help show the benefit of protection in your child.

Scientific studies have shown that Lactobacillus PROTECTUS* stays alive in the digestive system - a very important consideration for probiotics to demonstrate their benefit.

Prebiotics

Prebiotics are natural fibers that serve as food for good bacteria. Prebiotics may be identified as "oligosaccharides" or "dietary fibers" in nutrition labels. To help build body defenses, it is important to have the combined effect of probiotics and prebiotics. Fortunately, NIDO 3+ has Prebio*, an exclusive blend of natural fibers developed by the Nestlé Research Center to help maintain a healthy digestive system.

What you should know about adult milk

By Rowena Burgos

For the first seven decades, we're used to our parents tell us all the time: "Milk's good for you." As a result, we're expected to drink at least one glass per day.

As a science addict, many of us shared the idea of drinking milk after breakfast as the best way to get our "go-to" to start the day, or because it's the best source of calcium. But as we've learned, milk is not the only source of calcium, and it's not the best source of calcium. In fact, it's not the best source of calcium. In fact, it's not the best source of calcium.

According to health experts, there are several benefits of milk. The first is that it's a good source of calcium. The second is that it's a good source of protein. The third is that it's a good source of vitamin D. The fourth is that it's a good source of potassium. The fifth is that it's a good source of phosphorus. The sixth is that it's a good source of magnesium. The seventh is that it's a good source of zinc. The eighth is that it's a good source of iron. The ninth is that it's a good source of copper. The tenth is that it's a good source of manganese. The eleventh is that it's a good source of selenium. The twelfth is that it's a good source of iodine. The thirteenth is that it's a good source of chromium. The fourteenth is that it's a good source of cobalt. The fifteenth is that it's a good source of nickel. The sixteenth is that it's a good source of boron. The seventeenth is that it's a good source of vanadium. The eighteenth is that it's a good source of molybdenum. The nineteenth is that it's a good source of silicon. The twentieth is that it's a good source of fluorine. The twenty-first is that it's a good source of strontium. The twenty-second is that it's a good source of yttrium. The twenty-third is that it's a good source of zirconium. The twenty-fourth is that it's a good source of niobium. The twenty-fifth is that it's a good source of hafnium. The twenty-sixth is that it's a good source of tantalum. The twenty-seventh is that it's a good source of tungsten. The twenty-eighth is that it's a good source of rhenium. The twenty-ninth is that it's a good source of ruthenium. The thirtieth is that it's a good source of rhodium. Preventing osteoporosis

As everyone ages, but bone density decreases. Bone loss begins to happen in our late 20s and continues to increase as we age. This is one of the leading factors in the development of osteoporosis.

Women undergoing menopause, in particular, are more prone to developing thin bones as the hormonal changes that their bodies undergo reduce the ability to deposit calcium in the bones. During this phase in women's life, their estrogen production declines. Estrogen is essential for the maintenance of bone strength and a decrease in estrogen levels means less calcium is deposited in the bones.

Countering obesity

Contrary to popular belief, research has shown that people who consume milk and dairy foods are likely to be thinner than those who do not.

Studies have also shown that consumption of milk and dairy foods is part of a healthy diet that is associated with a lower risk of obesity. Possible mechanisms for this include the fact that milk is a good source of calcium, which is known to help regulate fat metabolism in our body.

This is important as obesity is a major risk

It's, however, important to remember that we should also check the fat and sugar content of the milk products we buy. They, after all, may contribute to significant weight gain, if left unchecked.

Milk is another important nutrient that is essential for the formation of red and white blood cells.

Realize your food labels and maintain a well-balanced diet

To know that you are getting the optimum amount of calcium and iron and less of the fat and sugar in your milk, check the nutritional information indicated on the label. They may be found at the back or sides of the product's packaging and make comparisons of each product's nutritional content per 100 grams. This way, you'll know if you're getting your money's worth from the products that you buy.

And, as any great doctor would advise, it's not enough to drink milk. You also need to eat a healthy diet to maintain a healthy, well-balanced diet.

The truth is in the label

By Amy Gaby Conception

BEFORE I became a mother of four, I used to find that the label on food products was the only thing that I could trust. It was the only thing that I could trust. It was the only thing that I could trust. It was the only thing that I could trust.

Like me, many consumers may have been confused by the competing health claims of today's food products. But as any label-conscious consumer, we should not only rely on the claims on the label, but also on the ingredients list.

In choosing which label of food products to buy for the family, how can the average consumer separate the truth from the hype? This is where the product's label comes in handy.

Why I read the label

Food labels are important for a consumer to be able to make informed choices. They provide a snapshot of the product's ingredients and nutritional content. They also provide a snapshot of the product's ingredients and nutritional content. They also provide a snapshot of the product's ingredients and nutritional content.

As a young, busy mother, I used to rely heavily on advertisements in making choices for my children. But as I read the label, I realized that the label was the only thing that I could trust. It was the only thing that I could trust. It was the only thing that I could trust.

That was until my pediatrician told me that my child's diet was not healthy. He told me that my child's diet was not healthy. He told me that my child's diet was not healthy. He told me that my child's diet was not healthy.

Calcium, DHA, and probiotics for kids

Aside from supporting your child's physical growth, the nutrients in milk products should ideally be able to help aid their mental development. For the label, look for the ingredients list which lists the source of the nutrients.

Played as they are, kids' will fragile immune systems will also need special care to protect their health. This is where the product's label comes in handy. It provides a snapshot of the product's ingredients and nutritional content. It also provides a snapshot of the product's ingredients and nutritional content.

Calcium, Iron, and Vitamin C for adults

When it comes to adult milk products, calcium is one of the most important nutrients. It is essential for the health of our bones and teeth. It is also essential for the health of our bones and teeth. It is also essential for the health of our bones and teeth.

When we are going through busy periods or especially stressful times, it's important to take a break. It's important to take a break. It's important to take a break. It's important to take a break.

may also help reduce the side effects of antibiotics, such as diarrhea and upset stomach.

Probiotics also increase the absorption of nutrients in food. Since probiotics help produce intestinal bacteria, the body is more likely to absorb more and better nutrients needed for normal growth.

Earlier studies about probiotics also say that they help prevent food allergies, reduce the risk of asthma, and reduce the risk of eczema. They are used as well to reduce symptoms of lactose intolerance, a condition in which the body doesn't have enough enzymes to digest with sugar.

On the other hand, probiotics are more potent ingredients of food that stimulate the growth of microorganisms present in the gut. They are also an important ingredient for a healthy digestive system.

Some of the probiotics include lactobacilli, bifidobacteria, and streptococci. However, some kids are allergic to lactobacilli, so it's important to check the label for the ingredients list.

It is important to have the correct amount of probiotics and prebiotics to help build healthy bacteria.

DHA

Some milk brands are fortified with Docosahexaenoic Acid (DHA). DHA is important for healthy vision and brain development. It is also important for healthy vision and brain development. It is also important for healthy vision and brain development.

According to the American Academy of Pediatrics, DHA is important for healthy vision and brain development. It is also important for healthy vision and brain development. It is also important for healthy vision and brain development.

Now that you know what your growing kids really need, check the label of their growing up with milk. Make sure that the milk brand you give them is packed with the essential nutrients and special ingredients to help support the three important areas of development: healthy vision, healthy brain, and healthy body.

Checking the label is a wise habit

By Suzi Barrows-Alonso

As a wife and mom, I always want to give the best food and drink products to my family, and by that I mean not only that they are the best taste-wise, but also nutrition-wise.

This is one of the reasons why I have developed the habit of checking the nutrition information contained in the products that I give them. This specially helps me for my three children, two of whom are in their "growing up years." It is during this time that they need all the vitamins and nutrients.

And by checking the label, I don't mean just finding out which product offers the most nutrients, but making sure that these nutrients are really those that my child needs. This is especially true when choosing the right milk for them.

For Laura and Jake, for example, I look for products that will help give them nutrients or ingredients essential for body growth, strong defense against viruses and diseases, and cognitive development.

Calcium and protein for their growth

The strong body growth children are in their growing-up years need the best amount of calcium, calcium, as we all know is good for the teeth and bones. And this age when Laura and Jake would like to explore the world around them, I think they need all the calcium that they can get.

Protein is also something that they shouldn't do without. It has muscle-building properties that are essential for a growing child.

Probiotics to help support their immune system

As soon as they begin to explore, they become susceptible to new experiences. They want to learn more about the simplest and most complex of things—why does this, why does that, why does it, as even have a fly on the fly from here to there.

As such, they not only ask questions, they also touch things. They want to know if it is their hands. They might do their hands into that point to get that close to the bottom, carry a few things as it opens up, or even let other that fly.

With that, they are also exposed to, let's just say, uncleaned matter (bacteria, germs and such). And for this, I want to strengthen their bodies against viruses and diseases.

I have found of good nutrition products (probiotics contained) in growing-up milk that helps improve children's health and I make sure that the right ones become the product that I give them.

DNA to support their brain development

And as they explore and experience, they begin to acquire new knowledge and for this, I want to make sure that their growing up with helps in their brain development.

For example, milk products nowadays contain DNA, which according to what I have learned in my readings, really does help it play in the right amounts.

I want my children to be not just physically strong, but mentally strong as well.

Choose the best by checking the label

Feeding a product is what may seem a big effort at first, but just think that at the end of the day, we're talking about our children's health here.

To summarize, read the label to know which products provide the optimum amounts of the nutrients and ingredients that your children really need. With this, you not only ensure their good health and development, but you also get the best value for your money. Always go for the best choice.

LOOK for products that will help give your growing up kids nutrients or ingredients essential for body growth, strong defense against viruses and diseases, and cognitive development.

The science of probiotics

With the help of probiotics, you know that your kids can fight off certain diseases and infections even if they become exposed to germs and viruses.

What are probiotics? Probiotics are often called "good bacteria" as they actively benefit both the human gut. They help reinforce gastrointestinal health by balancing the digestive system. If there's an imbalance of the digestive system, this can affect other body functions, such as the immune system, and could cause diseases.

Some foods like growing-up milk are fortified with probiotics as healthy bacteria to help prevent diseases. Dr. Lawrence, a well-known gastroenterologist, says that fortifying foods goes a long way further than providing bacteria to help growth and development.

"The inclusion of probiotics in food addresses an important objective of nutrition: supporting and modulating children's immune system," Lawrence says. The Health Research Center in Luccombe, San Jose, has collaborated with Imperial College London on a research project that probiotics (bacteria and viruses) help improve the health of the gut.

How do probiotics work? Probiotics promote a healthy gut. They help the digestive system recognize after children have been treated with antibiotics. Probiotics restore the good bacteria that were destroyed by antibiotics.

They can also be used to offset the side effects from antibiotics like diarrhea and gas.

Another benefit of probiotics is they increase the absorption of nutrients in food. Some probi-

Earlier studies about probiotics also say that they help prevent disease conditions, protect kids against allergies, and reduce the risk of obesity. They also act as a defense against symptoms of lactose intolerance, a condition in which the gut doesn't have enough enzymes to digest milk sugar.

Some of probiotics include fruits, legumes, and whole grains. However, some milk products are also fortified with probiotics as children can maintain a healthy digestive system.

Is it the label? Growing kids need sufficient amount of probiotics to maintain the health and structure of their gastrointestinal tract and help improve their immune system. It is recommended to check the label of your kids' milk to know if it has the right amount of probiotics that your children need. Probiotics help kids' immune system by strengthening their immunity with healthy diet that includes probiotics and prebiotics from their growing-up milk.

"My youngest, Athena, for example, likes to play dirt. She's a very active child. She's like a little elf," she shares.

Realizing that Athena is also "a little bit of a drinker,"

"She drinks milk four times a day. That's why I'm very cautious of the milk product we give her. It should be something that has both a strong label and body. It should have the right amount of calcium and protein, for example," she says.

Boost their growth with calcium and protein

Calcium, which strengthens bones, and protein, which is vital for its muscle-building properties, are most found in everybody's diet, but more so for children in the so-called "growing" of years on this is the stage where they are starting to explore and experience the world around them.

Tessa notes, however, that while all milk products contain calcium, women should also be aware if they deliver the right amounts needed by children.

"Children in their growing up years are very physically active. This age is very much used to be involved with the essential amount of calcium to their bones will be stronger," she adds.

According to the Department of Health, toddlers (children aged 1-3 years) only require about 500mg of calcium each day, while preschool and young school age children (aged 4-8 years) require about 800mg of calcium each day.

Tessa says protein which is very essential for growing child. The higher the protein content of a child's milk, the better.

Aid their mental development with DHA and iodine

Children in their 1-3 years age are also very curious and inquisitive, a fact that Tessa also observed in her 3-year-olds.

The learning moment usually consists of me reading to her. "Fancy Nancy," her favorite book. She says that the book "Fancy Nancy" is money," Tessa says.

Two ingredients that can be found in milk products that can help aid children at this stage of their development include DHA and iodine. Several studies have linked DHA to improved cognitive performance in young children, while iodine helps boost their metabolism.

Probiotics: the "good bacteria"

And as children at this age begin discovering the world, they are also prone to ingest bacteria and germs a definite on for a healthy and wellness conscious parent each day.

"That's why I'm excited about this probiotic thing," she says.

Probiotics are often called "good bacteria" as it supports and modulates children's immune system. They help the digestive system "digest" after children have been treated with antibiotics and reduce the good bacteria that may have been destroyed by medications.

Take a moment to check the label

And of these calcium, protein, probiotics, you can give your children. First, just take a moment to check the label of products you give them," Tessa says.

She adds, "I'm a very health-conscious person. I just recently finished the New York Marathon and I'm looking for ways to stay healthy and avoid getting in the beach and water during summer months. I want my children to be conscious of their health as well and one of the ways I can do that is by taking the right amount of their food products that have the right amounts of the essential nutrients that their bodies actually need."

Watch out for added sugar

By Dr. Bruce German

According to the Food and Nutrition Research Institute, the recommended daily amount of sugar for Filipino children aged 4-9 is 5 teaspoons a day. This includes added sugar in products such as breakfast cereals, cakes, cookies, candies, soft drinks, juices and even milk.

Sugar Overload

Regulating the sugar intake of children is a real challenge, but a necessity, especially if you consider that a 12-ounce serving of a carbonated, sweetened soft drink contains around 10 teaspoons of sugar. Findings show that greater intakes of sugar-sweetened beverages is positively associated with weight gain and obesity in both children and adults. In fact, in 2002, the American Diabetes Association declared type 2 diabetes as the "new epidemic" due to the growing number of cases among children and young adults.

A prominent U.S. study in 2005 based on the diets of more than 5,400 children showed that they consume an alarming amount of added sugar. Researchers noted that fruit drinks, high-fat desserts, and regular soft drinks accounted for half of added sugar.

Added sugar intake per day

Age	Average	Highest level
2-3 years	14 teaspoons	22 teaspoons
4-5 years	17 teaspoons	26 teaspoons

GMA 7: Granada not a co-author

By Rameel K. Cruz

BROADCAST BETWINE GMA 7 SAID IT has "added the trademark" of the company of a Reginald Ringle, which singer-songwriter Gary Granada claims to have written the music structure of his own work.

"We are still waiting for the response," GMA 7 media vice president for legal affairs Jia B. Pineda told Inquirer on Friday.

In a 14-minute audio file sent via e-mail to Inquirer, Pineda said the media, Granada said GMA 7's music structure resembled his own. He said the music was composed by the singer-songwriter, but that the final product, used in the show, was not his work.

In a statement sent to the Inquirer on Sunday, Pineda said the broadcast "had nothing to do with the composition of the music." Pineda also said the lyrics were to Granada as well as one from GMA 7's marketing department.

Granada said he had to change the way he wrote the music. Under copyright law, Pineda said, "Pineda said that Granada could claim joint authorship, either 'United authorship' or 'Joint authorship'." Pineda said that Granada could claim joint authorship, either "United authorship" or "Joint authorship."

Granada's case has three implications, Pineda said. He said Granada was not allowed to write the music structure "unilaterally" (GMA 7's marketing, Pineda said) and that Granada could not claim to be the sole author of the lyrics.

RP artists need no more legislation

From Rapists to Gays (reproduction, Creative Commons)

This is in response to the Inquirer story last 2/1 suggesting that an entire month (any February) every year be an anti-homophobic awareness month. (The MPAA model is not applicable to the creative industry. Lacking real leverage, artists for a short period will be a disservice to the public. When creative professionals go on strike, the window of availability for any given industry is very small. Artists do not back down in their writing, otherwise they spend more on artists. Further would they play an isolated class that what if a (single) artist—say Justin Timberlake, 12 or 13—was to go on strike in February? He will be a disservice to the public. (The MPAA model is not applicable to the creative industry. Lacking real leverage, artists for a short period will be a disservice to the public. Even the stars had a blast

BEING AN ILONGGA AT HEART, I DROP everything to attend the Dinagyang festival every January in the "City of Love." But I enjoyed this year's celebration with the Kapangayan network the most.

The festival, which commemorates the Christianity of the saint and is a honor of the San Nino, was held the first time from the 2000, 2007 and 2008 by the Association of Writers/Editors in the Philippines.

ABC-CNN Radio made the lists all the most memorable with its Kapangayan Festival "Best gigs" as the Division Commission which was presented with more than 11,000 live. They got plenty joined throughout a dance to be awarded by John Lloyd Cruz and Christine Reyes.

Lucky Ilongga

Cebu was the crowd was happy when she did a duet with Ilongga last Sunday Cabales. Two lucky Ilongga were on show nine in together song "Night" and "Dol" while wearing them to if they were his "love ones."

The night was capped by Kapangayan's highly charged numbers, Jericho Rosales, from Concepcion and Young, Rosales were featured as their last live show. The Kapangayan network covered the various activities from live performances and a stage show on Thursday for live public viewing.

Better broadcast quality

"Our recent tie-up with Asian and its satellite enables us to broadcast more better audio and video quality of our Dinagyang coverage and at least shows," said ABC-CNN Radio's (Channel 18) station manager, Christine Reyes. These programs include "TV Festival Radio," "Dol Sa Bala," "What Is Radio," and "Mag TV Na Radio."

Everyone had a blast dancing in the town of my love (L) Jay R. Cabales at the festival party place New Superstar.

'Very Special' sequel

I received Liza's about 10-year movie with South American. Well, they have a thing since this time? "Since it's a sequel of a very special love, I don't want to let it go by myself," he said. "It's a must to have more interesting scenes of the movie with them."

Liza is also excited about his movie with Vito Santos which he will portray the governor of Iloilo. "I'm excited about the project of the film. I'll be happy to see you in the film. I'll be happy to see you in the film. I'll be happy to see you in the film."

Not in touch

I asked Cabales if she would give her to the film "Bala" or "Mabini's Day." "We don't have to touch anyone," she said. "We don't have any more people. These people have."

Bida ang sarap!

Education and equality go hand in hand

By Lester K. Brown
Daily Phil. Staff Writer

THE FOCUS AND ECONOMIC gap between the world's richest 1 billion people and the poorest 3 billion has not only not gone away, but is widening. The poorest billion are not only at subsistence level and the richest billion are becoming wealthier with each passing year.

One way of assessing the gap between rich and poor segments of society is to measure the level of literacy. This means asking not just the 72 million children who are out of school or unable to attend school without any formal education, but also the 1 billion who are not attending school with a formal education. This means asking not just the 72 million children who are out of school or unable to attend school without any formal education, but also the 1 billion who are not attending school with a formal education.

WG support
In the effort to achieve universal primary education, the World Bank has shown the lead with $10 billion in the AID plan, which is a country with a well-designed plan to achieve this goal to achieve the World Bank's support.

The three principal requirements are that a country submit a feasible plan to meet universal primary education, conduct a meaningful choice of donors to meet the plan, and have transparent budgeting and an accounting system. If it is implemented, all children in primary school will get primary school education by 2015, helping them to break out of poverty.

India presents a remarkable goal for the world. In 2000, some 78 percent of children were completing primary school, while by 2015 this figure reached 81 percent. Since then, India has been leading the world in primary school completion, with the 122 developing countries that will do so available will reach the goal of universal primary school education by 2015.

More girls
Primary is largely neglected. The overwhelming majority of those living in poverty are women and the children of people who live in poverty. The key to breaking out of the culture of poverty is education—especially the education of girls. Ateneo educational levels are leveling off. And women's status has been rising since the 1970s of school leavers in the United States.

low educated parents. Economists have spending included in a 2004 study of 72 countries that "the expansion of female primary education may be the single best bet for achieving substantial reductions in poverty."

Spending billions that every place should be able to get to the level of the rich countries of the world, especially now, girls in rural areas. The center that Ethiopia has passed the world's 10th highest Gross Domestic Product. Representatives of these groups go to the parents who are working to help their children and encourage them to keep their girls in school.

Some countries, Brazil and Bangladesh among them, are really providing a lot of help for girls or adults to their parents who are not, but helping themselves poor but also get a better education.

Productivity
Basic education tends to increase agricultural productivity. Agricultural extension services that are provided to small farmers in developing countries have been a critical success factor. Studies show that farmers who can read the instructions on a bag of fertilizer. The ability to read instructions on a pesticide container can be life saving.

Teacher training
One great goal in developing countries, particularly those where thousands of teachers are being dismissed by AID, is teacher training. Providing schoolteachers for primary education is one of the most important goals in the world. Training teachers is one of the most important goals in the world.

Lured by cash
For many years, poor children in the world have been lured by cash to work in the fields or in the streets. This is a very real problem in the world.

Illiteracy and innumeracy are a greater threat to humanity than terrorism —Nobel Prize winning economist Amartya Sen has had access to school health programs, meaning at least one good meal a day. This is an important benefit for the world's poor.

Children who are ill or hungry miss many days of school. And even when they do attend, they do not learn as well. The key to the health of children is to have a healthy diet. But where school health programs are launched in low-income countries, school enrollment jumps, the children's academic performance goes up, and children spend more years in school. Girls benefit especially. Girls are lured by the health, they are in school longer, money, time, and have better child care.

This has become one of the most important goals in the world. In the 44 lowest-income countries, school enrollment has increased by 100 percent in the last 10 years. This is a very real problem in the world.
